

One Earth, One People Symposium

November 26- December 1, 2006

A week-long environmental symposium for High School Students

Woodleaf Outdoor School presents our fourth International Symposium on the Environment. This in-depth look at world environmental issues brings together high school students from throughout the world to study, discuss, and analyze today's environmental issues with renowned scientists and naturalists.

Themes:

Global economics and the environment

Including:

- Sustainable and renewable Energy
- "Green" Economics
- The Politics of "Green"
- The "Green Consumer"

Forests, Oceans, and Habitats of the World— We are all connected

Including:

- The status of the world's forests and oceans
- Endangered Species and Migratory Animals
- The impacts of human action
- Our connection to the habitats of the world

Working Together for a Bright Future

Including:

- "Think globally, act locally"
- Action plans to address local and global issues
- Networking with fellow participants
- Celebrating our connections and differences

Presenters:

Paulo Valerio

One of Costa Rica's premiere naturalists, Mr. Valerio possesses in-depth knowledge of the Central American rainforests and is a gifted and dynamic instructor. A favorite of One Earth, One People participants, he has been a presenter at each of our symposiums.

Josh Jones

A Marine Biologist from Southern California, Mr. Jones has traveled the world researching issues ranging from whale conservation to marine toxins. Much of his work has been sponsored by the National Geographic Society.

John Hendrickson

A renowned nature photographer and expert ornithologist, Mr. Hendrickson is the author of many books and articles on birds of prey and natural history. His work has been featured in National Geographic, Time Magazine, and numerous other publications.

Details:

Who is the Symposium For?

The symposium is designed to reach people from around the world. We are inviting outstanding high school juniors and seniors who are interested in global environmental issues and working toward solutions to today's challenges.

What does it Cost?

Student cost for the five night/six day program is $209 per person (all inclusive)
Adult Facilitator cost is $120 for the week-long program.

How do I sign up?

For more information and a brochure, contact George Stratman, Director, Woodleaf Outdoor School at georges@sutter.k12.ca.us. (530) 822-2948